Postal Orders & Postal Notes: The Jack Harwood Collection

Postal orders, also called 'postal notes' in some countries, were first introduced in Queensland in 1880, followed by Great Britain in 1881. They were intended to facilitate the transmission of small amounts of money whilst a money order system typically operated in parallel for the transfer of larger amounts. Purchased at a post office and payable at another post office to the named recipient, a small fee for the service, known as 'poundage', would be paid by the purchaser.

Postal Orders/Postal Notes are today recognised by the International Federation of Philately (FIP) as a sub-category of postal stationery for the purposes of exhibition and many recent postal stationery catalogues and literature now include them where information is available.

POSTAL ORDER SOCIETY

The society was formed in 1985 by a group of keen collectors to promote the nascent hobby and encourage the study of Postal Orders, Postal Notes, Post Office Money Orders and related ephemera. This came a year after two publications on Postal Orders, which included history, definitive listings and prices. Whilst the society is UK-based the membership is world-wide, including Europe, USA, Canada, New Zealand and Australia. The total membership is around 80.

Since they were first issued in 1881, Postal Orders have achieved a degree of notoriety. The well-known play The Winslow Boy has a plot which centres on the true story of a naval cadet who was dismissed for allegedly stealing a 5/- order, which is still extant in the Post Office archives.

In the school yarns, Billy Bunter was always expecting his Postal Order, which generally failed to materialise. In spite of the advent of far easier means of transmitting money, Postal Orders are as popular as ever and are still sold in millions. Internet sales and auctions are now boosting their use. Automated Postal Orders, recently introduced, have consigned the counterfoil and local hand-stamp to history, but different varieties are still there for the discerning collector.

Many of the facets of stamps can be found in Postal Orders. There are perfins, which have perforated date-stamps and were issued as football payments; overprints and surcharges; watermark varieties, including sideways and reversed; machine issued; errors; commemoratives; booklets and legal tender issues relating to the first weeks of both World Wars.

In the mid-1980s special customised or promotional Postal Orders appeared, the first being issued by Cinzano in return for a number of bottle caps. These colourful innovations continued from the makers of coffee, car mats and others. In 2006 Postal Order cash-backs were issued by Knorr, Birds Eye, Ecover and the Post Office Insurance.

Ordinary Postal Orders used to donate to charity have the added facility of a claim for tax originally paid by the donor by means of a declaration on the reverse of the order.

Most collectors tend to specialise in British Postal Orders (BPOs), but more than a hundred issuers (countries and states) have sold British and/or their own internal orders. Around thirty still do, mainly ex British Colonies and Commonwealth. Some issues were called Postal Notes. Many overseas issued BPOs were overprinted. British Forces abroad carried their own stocks and they were issued at Field Post Offices. There were mobile post office hand-stamps for issues at big events, eg Wimbledon.

Members of the society receive a quarterly newsletter packed with information, views, details of current issues and much more.

Postal auctions are conducted on a regular basis and a members' list of items for sale is available, which is especially suitable for new members. The UK subscription is £5 pa.

The society is a member of the Association of British Philatelic Societies (ABPS) and the American Philatelic Society (APS)

Kenneth W Carter (1926 – 2020)

Coming from a family of well-established local butchers, Ken had deep roots in the Barnet area with a devotion to its residents and a fascination for its history. He was educated in the borough at Queen Elizabeth's School during the war years and would later reminisce about fire-watching at the school whilst accompanied by the headmaster and listening to records of Wagner operas at high volume.

Ken was accepted to read for a degree in Medieval & Modern Languages at Queen's College, Oxford. After graduation he carried out his National Service with the RAF and was based at Lüneburg, Germany. In 1951 he returned to his old school as a teacher of French and German and so enjoyed the position that he continued in the role, with growing responsibilities, until his retirement in 1982. Ken was held in the greatest esteem by his colleagues and was a warmly remembered mentor and guide to successive generations of pupils that included my father, my uncle and me.

His six-day working week included Saturday morning school and extra-curricular activities that often lasted well into the evening. One of the most absorbing of these proved to be athletics, where Ken's participation grew from county level to involvement with the Amateur Athletic Association itself. As a member of its organising committee he made a major contribution to projects including the development of the Crystal Palace National Sports Centre.

A cultured man, multifaceted in his range of interests and with a ready wit, Ken was however very private in his demeanour. Among many talents that he tended to hide he was a skilled cabinet maker and even made his own dining suite. Choral music was another great love and in later years after moving to Somerset with his devoted wife Jocelyn he became a stalwart of his local church choir.

Ken's greatest passion of all, though, was philately, which was a lifelong hobby. He was a proud member of the India Study Circle for many years right up until his death and enjoyed being part of the society's generous exchange of knowledge and new research. Ken kept detailed records of his every purchase and ensured that the vast majority came from trusted auction houses or reliable dealers. The quality of the exceptional collection that he was able to form, including the particularly challenging issues of the princely states, represents a lasting tribute to the thousands of hours of careful study that he dedicated to its careful assembly.
